

Polina Kulish is a research fellow and PhD candidate at the Friedrich Schiller University of Jena. She also works as a Managing Editor for the Völkerrechtsblog. During her PhD project, she completed a Bluebook Traineeship at the European Commission in 2022/2023. Her research encompasses the law of international organizations, including the UN, the EU, the EEA, and the EAEU, as well as international security law and media law. She is a former recipient of a Konrad Adenauer Foundation academic scholarship and has been actively involved in moot court communities as a participant, coach, and judge. As a Kyiv-Mohyla Academy team member in Telders 2016–2017, she represented Ukraine in the international rounds, where her team placed 4th and was awarded 2nd place in oral pleadings. The following year, she competed with Jena University in Jessup. Since 2021, she has contributed as a coach for public international law moot courts. From 2020 to 2022, she also served as a judge in the Jessup and Price Media Law competitions.
